Arredondo, age 21, was last seen on 11/25/88 when she dropped her boyfriend off at Neil's, a bar in Glendale, south of Denver. Arredondo's car, a red 1988 Mustang convertible, was found abandoned a few blocks from the bar at east 7th and Jackson, and appeared to have been involved in an accident. Witnesses said she had been abducted from the accident site by "several unknown male suspects." Her body was found on US 36 near Estes Park in Larimer County the next day. She had suffered fatal blows to her head. Investigation produced condemned killer Robert Harlan as a suspect. Harlan, the son of a Denver Police officer, now sits on Colorado's Death Row for the 1993 slaying of Rhonda Maloney, a Central City casino waitress he abducted and killed. Harlan was also found guilty of shooting and paralyzing Jacque Creazzo, the woman who tried to come to Maloney's aid. Harlan became a suspect in the Arredondo slaying after police interviewed his former co-workers at US West where Arredondo worked as an Information Operator.

This 84 year old male was being cared for in his home by his niece, Darlene Goddard, and her college-aged son, Kristopher Koetteng. The decedent had sustained blunt trauma to the central nervous system in a fall approximately 5 months prior to death. Since the fall, he was in deteriorating health and a downhill neurological course. Ultimately, he became totally helpless and bedridden with paralysis, aphasia, and loss of bladder and bowel control. Although there was initially no evidence of foul play, an autopsy was performed to document trauma related to the fall. A fractured hyoid bone and fresh bruising to the neck muscles was found at autopsy, indicating recent manual strangulation.
